the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased in the UK. The prevalence of mental health problems has increased from 10% in 1990 to 15% in 2000 (Mental Health Act 1983, 1990, 1994, 1998, 2003).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the lives of people with mental health problems. The Government has set out a vision for mental health care in the UK (Department of Health 2003). The vision is that people with mental health problems should be able to live their lives in the community, rather than in hospital. This vision is based on the principle of recovery, which is the process of regaining a sense of purpose and meaning in life.

Recovery is a process, not a destination. It is a journey that starts with the person and their own experiences. It is a journey that is unique to each person. Recovery is a process that involves the person taking control of their own life and making choices about their future. Recovery is a process that involves the person working with others to achieve their goals.
