the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are undernourished has increased from 600 million to 800 million. The number of people who are malnourished has increased from 1.2 billion to 1.5 billion. The number of people who are obese has increased from 100 million to 300 million.

There are a number of reasons for this. One of the main reasons is that the world population has increased from 5 billion to 6 billion.

Another reason is that the world population is becoming more urban. This means that there are more people living in cities, where the food supply is more limited.

A third reason is that the world population is becoming more affluent. This means that there are more people who can afford to eat more food, which leads to an increase in obesity.

There are also a number of other factors that contribute to the increase in malnutrition and obesity. These include changes in the diet, changes in the environment, and changes in the way we live.

It is important to understand the causes of malnutrition and obesity in order to develop effective strategies to address these problems. This paper will discuss the causes of malnutrition and obesity and the implications for public health.

The first section of the paper will discuss the causes of malnutrition. This will include a discussion of the role of food availability, food quality, and food access.

The second section of the paper will discuss the causes of obesity. This will include a discussion of the role of diet, physical activity, and genetics.

The third section of the paper will discuss the implications of malnutrition and obesity for public health. This will include a discussion of the impact on mortality, morbidity, and quality of life.

The fourth section of the paper will discuss strategies to address malnutrition and obesity. This will include a discussion of the role of government, the private sector, and civil society.

The fifth section of the paper will discuss the conclusion. This will include a discussion of the need for a multi-sectoral approach to address malnutrition and obesity.

The sixth section of the paper will discuss the references. This will include a list of the sources used in the paper.

The seventh section of the paper will discuss the acknowledgements. This will include a list of the people who have helped with the paper.

The eighth section of the paper will discuss the disclaimer. This will include a statement that the views expressed in the paper are those of the author and not necessarily those of the organization.

The ninth section of the paper will discuss the contact information. This will include the author's name, address, and telephone number.

The tenth section of the paper will discuss the copyright. This will include a statement that the paper is copyrighted by the author.
