Oil, Refining and Chemicals Insurance

Our client is a major player in the global insurance sector involved in the provision of cover to large scale oil and gas, refinery, petrochemical, and chemicals facilities worldwide.

This is a challenging and exciting role for a significantly experienced senior chemical engineer with extensive exposure to and understanding of refinery and/or petrochemical operations.

Candidates should offer experience of either long-term business planning (LP modelling, refinery economics, strategic analysis) or short-term operational planning (production scheduling, turnarounds, work arounds etc). Insight into the consequential production/business implications of unit downtime and interdependency would be especially welcome. Our client is currently not looking for dedicated safety or process design engineers at present for this role.

Supporting clients throughout the Middle East, the appointee will undertake site condition surveys, review operating procedure and integrity, evaluate unit interdependency, assess potentials for consequential loss/interruption, undertake desktop risk assessments and produce clear, high-quality reports for underwriters, clients, and brokers. The aim of these surveys is to reduce the likelihood and/ or consequences of safety incidents and assist with the insurance placement process. Foreign language skills would be welcome. About 70 days travel within the EMEA region can be expected.

Interested and suitably qualified candidates should forward a Word version of their CV and a brief covering letter to Mark Stracey at Mark Stracey Recruitment.
