Quick study – able to gain a fact-based understanding of current supplier base, supplier economics and major trends in relevant markets.

of the study, the authors concluded that the use of a single, standardized, and validated instrument to assess the quality of care is a feasible and effective method for assessing the quality of care in a multi-site study.

There are several limitations to this study. First, the study was a cross-sectional study and therefore cannot establish causality. Second, the study was conducted in a single hospital and therefore the results may not be generalizable to other hospitals. Third, the study was limited to the assessment of the quality of care for a single condition (acute myocardial infarction) and therefore the results may not be generalizable to other conditions.

In conclusion, this study has shown that the use of a single, standardized, and validated instrument to assess the quality of care is a feasible and effective method for assessing the quality of care in a multi-site study. The study also showed that the use of a single, standardized, and validated instrument to assess the quality of care is a feasible and effective method for assessing the quality of care in a multi-site study.
