Description:

At its most basic level, work in presales involves everything towards a sale up to – but not including – the closing deal. A presales consultant works with potential clients or customers to ensure they have a strong understanding of the services and/or products provided/.

Responsibilities:

delivering presentations and demonstrations to prospective and current clients liaising with those developing products/services to gain an in-depth knowledge that you can relate to customers – and to let them in on user behaviour and/or any potential changes clients would like helping the sales team to reach targets conducting research into the industry – including competitor research encouraging clients to buy extras, upgrades etc potentially considering new markets or clients to contact, based on your knowledge of both the products/services and their users.
