About the job

Thoracic surgeons often consult with a patient's other physicians, such as a cardiologist. Surgeons carefully read through a medical record thoroughly to learn about any potential risks or complications the patient may have that could affect the surgery, such as an allergy to anesthesia or a blood-borne pathogen that could be spread to the surgeons or other members of the surgical team.

Requirements

Education: Cardiothoracic surgeons must complete a medical degree program. They typically earn a Bachelor of Science in pre-medicine, complete pre-medical coursework and earn a bachelor's degree in a science field, such as biology or chemistry.

After completing their undergraduate degree, aspiring cardiothoracic surgeons must earn a medical degree. They typically spend four years in medical school, where they study anatomy, physiology, pathology, pharmacology, biochemistry, psychology, ethics and medical law.
